Discontinuance before term commitment is fulfilled:

If a customer discontinue the PRI service within the contract period currently in effect, termination charges will apply. Such charges will be calculated as follows:

A customer who agrees to a term commitment and receives the specified discount but cancels service before the end of the term commitment will be required to pay what the customer would have paid for the term the customer actually took. For example, if a customer took a three-year term and receives a 20% discount but cancels at the two year mark the customer will be required to pay the extra 5% discount they received but wouldn't have received if they had signed the two-year term originally.

A customer who signs a term of service commitment, but discontinues service before completion of the first year of the agreed upon term must pay back all waived nonrecurring charges.
